

Dalberg Announces Opening of Office in Dar es Salaam

Dalberg is proud to announce we are expanding our presence in Africa by opening a new office in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

Devang Vussonji, a Partner in the Africa region, will lead the Dar es Salaam office. He also leads Dalberg's Employment and Education practice globally and he looks forward to bringing his personal interests and expertise to bear in Tanzania. "We are pleased to be establishing a long-term presence in Tanzania as the country joins the ranks of rapidly growing countries in Africa," Devang Vussonji said. "We look forward to supporting both the public and the private sectors in improving their competitive and investment strategies and helping them meet their full potential. We have already been privileged to support change makers in sectors as diverse as agriculture, healthcare, energy, employment & education, access to finance, and digital technologies, and we look forward to contributing to the nation's continued development."

The Dar es Salaam office will work alongside 14 other Dalberg offices worldwide, including four offices located across Africa, in Johannesburg, Lagos, Dakar, and Nairobi, to devise effective responses to development challenges around the globe.

With over 100 full-time staff in the Africa region, Dalberg is committed to helping clients design, deliver, and evaluate socially impactful policies and initiatives, leveraging knowledge from our work across Africa and the globe. Our recent client engagements in the region have spanned diverse topics from scaling up connectivity efforts, to launching agricultural innovation challenges, to region-wide initiatives tackling the continent's massive youth employment challenges.

"The opening of our office in Dar es Salaam provides an exciting opportunity to deepen our impact on critical issues around inclusive and sustainable growth in Tanzania and East Africa," says Yana Watson Kakar, Dalberg's Global Managing Partner. "One of Dalberg's distinguishing characteristics has always been our extensive footprint and networks across sub-Saharan Africa. I am pleased to add Dar es Salaam to help us expand our work in the region."
